Legal Arguments

The following arguments are drafted on the basis of allegations that remain unverified. They do not constitute a finding of fact and are provided for legal-theory discussion.

I. T-Mobile ' s Alleged Interference with Internet Access

Under 47 U.S.C. § 201(b) and § 202(a) the Communications Act prohibits common carriers from engaging in unjust, unreasonable, or unreasonably discriminatory practices. Intentional throttling or denial of service, if proven, may therefore expose T-Mobile to injunctive relief and damages. Where such interference rises to intentional unauthorized access or damage to a protected computer system, the Computer Fraud and Abuse Act, 18 U.S.C. § 1030(g), provides a private civil cause of action for compensatory damages, injunctive relief, and attorney ' s fees.

II. Twitch: Cyber-Harassment and Religious Discrimination

Twitch ' s alleged targeted cyberattacks could support tort claims for intrusion upon seclusion and intentional infliction of emotional distress under state common law. Additionally, if Twitch ' s content-moderation or messaging policies discriminate on the basis of religion, a claim could be brought under 42 U.S.C. § 2000a et seq. (public accommodations) or relevant state civil-rights statutes, subject to Twitch ' s status as a place of public accommodation in the jurisdiction.

III. Google: Antitrust and Tortious Interference

Google's alleged use of market power in AI to exclude or penalize developers may constitute monopolization or attempted monopolization under § 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 2. A plaintiff must show (1) monopoly power in a relevant market and (2) exclusionary conduct. If counsel were to advance arguments that knowingly contradict controlling precedent, such conduct could be sanctionable under Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(c) and may invite a court's contempt powers. Related common-law claims include tortious interference with prospective economic advantage.

IV. Authorization to Satisfy Judgment via Cryptographic Assets

Federal courts possess equitable power to fashion remedies that include the turnover of assets in any form capable of satisfying a money judgment. Fed. R. Civ. P. 69(a) incorporates state collection procedures, many of which (e.g., Wyo. Stat. § 34-29-101) expressly recognize cryptocurrency as property. Executive Order 14067 and the Treasury's 2023 'Illicit Finance Risk Assessment of Decentralized Finance' acknowledge digital assets as lawful mediums of exchange. Accordingly, a court may order defendants—or the United States in a Federal Tort Claims Act action, 28 U.S.C. §§ 1346(b), 2671-80—to satisfy an award through transfer of designated cryptocurrency to a court-controlled wallet, provided such transfer complies with 31 C.F.R. pt. 1010 (FinCEN) and OFAC sanctions programs.
