Legal Arguments

The following arguments are drafted on the basis of allegations that remain unverified. They do not constitute a finding of fact and are provided for legal-theory discussion.

I. T-Mobile ' s Alleged Interference with Internet Access

Under 47 U.S.C. § 201(b) and § 202(a) the Communications Act prohibits common carriers from engaging in unjust, unreasonable, or unreasonably discriminatory practices. Intentional throttling or denial of service, if proven, may therefore expose T-Mobile to injunctive relief and damages. Where such interference rises to intentional unauthorized access or damage to a protected computer system, the Computer Fraud and Abuse Act, 18 U.S.C. § 1030(g), provides a private civil cause of action.

II. Twitch: Cyber-Harassment and Religious Discrimination

Twitch ' s alleged targeted cyberattacks could support tort claims for intrusion upon seclusion and intentional infliction of emotional distress under state common law. If content-moderation practices discriminate on the basis of religion, 42 U.S.C. § 2000a et seq. and analogous state statutes may apply.

III. Google: Antitrust and Tortious Interference

Google ' s alleged exclusionary use of AI market power may constitute monopolization under 15 U.S.C. § 2. Knowingly advancing arguments contrary to controlling precedent risks Rule 11 sanctions and contempt.

IV. Authorization to Satisfy Judgment via Cryptographic Assets

Federal courts possess equitable power to order turnover of assets in any form capable of satisfying a money judgment. Digital-asset transfer is consistent with Fed. R. Civ. P. 69(a) and recognized under various state property statutes; compliance with 31 C.F.R. pt. 1010 and OFAC regulations is required.

V. Request for PRC Authorization to Deploy Cryptographic Preservation Measures

Pursuant to Articles 272 and 273 of the Civil Code of the People ' s Republic of China (2020) and Articles 100 and 101 of the Civil Procedure Law (2021 rev.), a party may apply for ' property preservation ' where immediate measures are necessary to prevent dissipation of assets. Article 35 of the PRC Cybersecurity Law authorizes competent departments to adopt technical measures to protect critical information infrastructure. Accordingly, the applicant respectfully seeks an order permitting deployment of cryptographic locking of digital assets controlled by identified abusers as an interim preservation measure pending adjudication. Such request is limited to encryption that (a) prevents unauthorized transfer, (b) retains full audit logs, and (c) remains reversible under court supervision. The measure is proportionate, preserves the status quo ante, and aligns with Supreme People ' s Court Interpretation on Property Preservation (Fa Shi [ 2020 ] 14 Hao).
